

METHOD FOR EXECUTING IRREGULAR PARALLEL CONTROL STRUCTURES

Abstract of the Disclosure

In some embodiments of the present invention, a parallel computer system provides a plurality of threads that execute code structures. A method may be provided to allocate available work between the plurality of threads to reduce idle thread time and increase overall computational efficiency. An otherwise idle thread may enter a work stealing mode and may locate and execute code from other threads.